Q&A with Kevin Buckley

How long does it take you to write a book? What is the writing process like?

This first novel was written between 3:00 and 6:00 in the morning, outside working hours. I write in whatever free time I can find.

When did you realize you wanted to be a writer?

I have long been fascinated by storytelling, the way that people perceive and grapple with their experiences and surroundings. I have always been a creative person, having dabbled in music. I now find writing to be the most passionate artistic outlet. I want my work to make people laugh while simultaneously being able to look critically at the complex world around them.

What are your hobbies outside of writing?

Testimonials: What are Readers Saying?

“Kevin E. Buckley’s novel combines elements from Men in Black, The X-Files and myriad TV cop shows as two wise-cracking detectives try to solve a murder involving a Hollywood landmark, gangsters, celebrities and a Burning-Man-like festival in the desert. A young starlet is found nude and shot to death, sprawled across the Y in the “Hollywood” sign overlooking Los Angeles. Long-time partners, Jerry “Leafy” Green and Bill “Beefy” Goodness are assigned to the case. But just possibly, the starlet’s murder was an accident, and the bullet was intended for another victim. Buckley has his detectives encountering conspiracy theories; the activity of drug lords, LA gangs and law-breaking police officers; and even an alien invasion. The final chapter is appropriately titled “Deus Ex Machina” when a new hero shows up completely out of the blue to save the day. In all, readers of [this inaugural novel] should agree that it’s a promising start.”

-Blueink Review

“Fanciful, brisk, and irreverent, The Secret Sign of the Lizard People is an eccentric satirical novel that thumbs its nose at the current world order.”
